

Call for Participation

2010 Ph.D. Challenge

This is the official call for submissions to the 2010 Ph.D. Challenge. All men and woman who are currently graduate students at an accredited University or Institute of higher-learning are welcome and encouraged to participate. The contest goal of the Ph.D. Challenge is to get the following phrase into the final, camera-ready version of a peer-reviewed academic paper:

I SMOKE CRACK ROCKS

The target phrase must appear contiguously in the text and must be visible by the human eye. The paper must be at least three pages and published in proceedings or journal of an English-speaking academic organization. See contest rules for additional information about submissions requirements.

The Ph.D. Challenge organization is proud to announce that the 2010 winner will receive a handsome reward along with the distinguished honor of winning the contest. We have procured the following items that will be rewarded to the individual that scores the highest in the final judging:

- 1 Box of Maruchan Ramen Noodle Soup
- 1 Autographed 8x10 Photograph of Paul Krugman
- 1 Pack of Leather Elbow Patches

All items subject to availability. The Ph.D. Challenge reserves the right to substitute prizes with a different item of equal value.

Accepting New Paper Submissions from January 1st to November 31st, 2010
